FROM THE OCEAN'S BED.

WONDERFUL CATCH OF A SMACK NEAR BLOCK ISLAND.

Beautiful Fauna and Flora, Quahaugs, Codfish and a Remarkable White Flounder—Other Curious Specimens Taken from the Bottom of the Briny Deep.

The fauna and flora of the miles of fishing banks spread out to the south and east of Block Island, under a blanket of salt water twenty fathoms deep, was never before brought ashore in larger quantities, in finer condition, nor as early in the season as in 1890.

Not until the invention of the trawl gear for fishing did man begin to form a correct idea of what the surface of the great fishing banks of the ocean was like. The hand line, jerked from a vessel's deck, brought scant traces of its beauties to the surface. But a codfishing trawl, 500 or 600 fathoms long, with hooks fastened to it a few feet apart by short lines, and dropped over one of these submarine gardens, insinuates itself among the rank foliage, among rocks and shells, down into caverns, and over forests of green. There it lies for hours. When pulled to the top of the water it is usually found to be loaded with cart loads of rare and beautiful specimens of submarine fauna and flora, and with abundant evidences that beneath the tons of heaving waters on these favored spots there exist gardens of a verdure as luxuriant, and peopled with animals as strange and curious, as can be found in any tropical jungle.

THE MARY C'S BIG HAUL.

The codfishing schooner smack Mary C. came into the Basin one night with her rawls so filled with this sort of a harvest that the entire next day was spent by her crew in clearing the 8,000 hooks she had "wet" during a few hours spent on Coxswain's ledge, twenty miles east southeast of Block Island. The Mary C.'s crew set their trawls on what is known as the "twenty fathom drift," on the outer edge of Coxswain's. This is a fertile sea farm, well known to cod trawlers, but never before was such a collection of wonders of the deep taken from it, as was found in the haul of the Mary C. Nearly every hook of the trawls contained something—fish or fauna, sea lettuce or kelp—the whole being so plentifully interspersed with beautiful and large, white belled and gray-backed codfish, as to make the smack's venture a profitable one.

One ribbon of the wide green velvety kelp, caught up by the hooks, was long enough to festoon easily and nicely from the schooner's jib stay, first to her foremast, then to her mainmast, and lastly to her main boom topping lift over the stern. The ruffled and flounced edges fluttered in the wind in this position all the time the smack lay in the basin.

A portion of the unusual catch consisted of black mussels and black pearl sea oysters. The mussels were very large—from a half to three-quarters of a pound in weight—but rank in flavor, and too tough to be eaten. There were four pearl oysters, each of which contained a little pearl, irregularly shaped, and of a silvery, ashen hue.

A PARTIAL LIST OF THE CURIOSITIES. Several specimens of the large black shelled quahaugs or hard clams were also caught up. The flesh of these is plump and tender and much liked by all who have tasted it. There is no doubt that there are huge beds of these bivalves in the deep sea off Coxswain's ledge, and it is likely that some deep water dredge nets will be constructed for the purpose of catching them in quantities.

Here is a partial list of the other most strikingly interesting things brought up by the Mary C.'s trawls: Sponges, sea corn, skates, Chris Connors or sea roses, sea robins, dog fish, Conger eels, sea lettuce or cabbage, sea peas, swallow alls and a white flounder.

Sponges have not been caught off Block Island for years. The Mary C. caught three fine specimens, the largest of sugar loaf shape, about eighteen inches in height, a foot in diameter, and divided into at least forty slender fingers. These sponges—as are those taken on the Nantucket shoals and George's Banks fishing grounds—are filled with the reddish yellow matter of animal life when taken from the sea, but repeated and careful squeezes, alternated with washing, eventually leaves them as white and clean as a lady's hand, and they become handsome parlor ornaments. There is not as much fabric in them as in those found in warmer seas, and consequently they cannot be put to any service.

BEAUTIFUL SEA ROSES.

By far the largest proportion of the curiosities on the trawls consisted of sea roses or "Chris Connors," as the codmen know them. Hundreds of them sucked in the trawl baits with their beautiful pink petals, and many a Block Island dame to-day has a pair of them blossoming out under salt water in her back yard. They make a pretty flower bed. The sea rose is a leathery looking object, which attaches itself to a stone at the bottom of the sea in its infancy, and which ultimately attains a size of about three inches in length by one and a half in breadth. When quiet and feeding under water its top opens and blossoms into a large pink rose, with petals fully an inch long, a really handsome object. As soon as it is disturbed, however, it shuts itself resolutely into its leather pod.

The sea cabbage and peas are terms applied to vegetable growths, always found in abundance on Coxswain's Ledge. The peas do not grow in a pod, but are separate, greenish objects found on certain sea weeds.

By far the greatest curiosity to fishermen, however, in the whole catch, was the white flounder. This was a flat fish of the usual type, as white on the back as it was on the belly. It was about twenty inches long and weighed about two pounds. There was not a brown spot upon it, and the poor fish's back was literally scarred where it had escaped the teeth of larger fish, its lack of color on the back evidently failing to protect it from the sight of its tormentors. The white flounder is regarded purely as a freak of nature. Its like was never seen before on the old Indian

The Street Car Whistle.

A nervous man came into the office and wanted to know why the conductor of the open street car is equipped with a shrill whistle for signaling purposes. No one was able to tell him on the spur of the moment. He upset two or three chairs in a nervous, St. Vitus' dance sort of a way in trying to sit down on one, and then went on with his complaint:

"May my tongue cleave to the roof of my house if I don't think these whistles are the infernal nuisances that ever were invented for the torture of human beings. The bells that are used on the closed cars are bad enough, but the whistle which the conductor of the open car is obliged to toot is a diabolism beyond all power to describe. In a trip lasting half an hour the conductor will blow in the neighborhood of a thousand blasts upon his fog horn, each one of which will shatter ten thousand nerves.

"You will observe that my own nerves are a total wreck," said the poor man as he tried to take off his hat, but his hands trembled so that he only shook off his overcoat instead.

"I have been talking to a specialist in nervous diseases about these whistles," he went on, "but of course he is in favor of them. The more people who are stricken with St. Vitus' dance, the more money will he make. I am not partial to St. Vitus' dance myself," concluded the victim, as he tried to look at his watch, but only succeeded in tearing open his vest, "but I will have it sure, unless this whistling abomination is suppressed," and he shook himself out the back way while struggling to reach the front door.—New York World.

The Stamp Collecting Craze.

"Grown up people, instead of boys, have within the past few years monopolized the business of collecting postage stamps," said a dealer in such merchandise the other day. "The craze has also become ever so much more elaborate. For example, a collector is no longer satisfied necessarily with one stamp of a kind. It may be that the same stamp has been issued on more than one kind of paper, and in that case one of each sort must be secured. Suppose the government of Heligoland gets out a two-cent stamp this year on 'wove' paper and next year prints the same stamp on 'laid' paper, the collector must have both varieties or else spend nights of sleepless grief over the vacancy in his album. It frequently happens, too, that the same stamp will be issued with different sorts of perforations at the edges. One edition of it will have perforations like those of Mr. Vanamaker's stamps; another will have what are called 'pin perforations,' another will have 'roletted' edges, like a theatre coupon, for tearing purposes, while still another will have no sort of perforation or other convenience for tearing whatever. But all these varieties must be in the collector's possession."—Washington Post.

Advantage of Running.

The long distance runners, however, seem to be the most rational in their choice of sport. In this there appears to be a real benefit. Emergencies may arise at any time in a man's life when he must get to one place from another in as short a time as possible; then the man who has accustomed himself to going long distances sees the value of his choice. Sprinting is of little value in such a case, and fast walking does not enter into it.

In connection with the long distance running, which is so steadily growing into a vogue, has come the organization of outing clubs and a rapid increase in the number of cross country runs. Where, a few years ago, but a dozen men could be found to take part in these, now there are hundreds. Every Sunday, when the weather is favorable, the different athletic clubs have a practice run, and there are many out for a ten or fifteen mile spin over the fields and hills, through bush and briar.—Charles P. Sawyer in Scribner's.

A Mother's Will.

The dead of Cagliari, Sardinia, are buried in a bright cemetery. "It is an ordered thicket of geraniums, in endless bloom," writes an English tourist; "and from the splendor peer forth the white marble tombs and the black crosses which pay tribute to the dead under the flowers."

The visitor sees that the mortality among the children of the city is very great, and reads with aching heart the walls of the mothers recorded upon the monumental marble.

On one monument is carved the figure of a little boy of three, seated in his nursery chair, with a toy horse in his hand, and his head upon one side, as if he were asleep. The mother's convulsive sigh is heard as the epitaph is read: "Naughty one! Why do you not awake?"

Another epitaph commemorates a child yet younger: "Within three days he was born, he suffered, and he died. Oh, true compendium of humanity!"

Milkmaids and Sweeps.

The great festival of the milkmaids and sweeps of the 1st of May dates its origin back to the Romans, who were wont to commemorate the festival of Flora, the goddess of flowers, for several days in May. May poles were forbidden to be erected by parliament in 1644, but they were restored again on the restoration of Charles II, and in 1661 the May pole in the Strand was reared with much ceremony and rejoicing. This pole, which stood near where Catherine street joins the Strand, was of cedar, and was raised by twelve seamen commanded by the Duke of York, who was then lord high admiral of England.—Chambers' Journal.

A 10-year-old Florida boy ran away from home and went a-fishing. In throwing his line he stuck the hook through his nose, when he ran to a doctor's office and had the hook filed in two and taken out, asking the doctor to say nothing about it. The boy did not mention the incident at home all questioned.

A WOMAN'S HAPPY LIFE.

SHE MANAGES TO LIVE IN COMPARATIVE LUXURY ON $1,000.

How a Family of Six Enjoys Existence in a Suburban Village—A Small House, Garden, Cow and a Cozy Home—An Ideal Picture—Healthy Summer Outings.

One thousand dollars with economy, thrift and a wise generosity is abundant wealth and secures all the needed pleasures of living. How do I know? I have tried it and proved it so.

During nine years of married life, beginning on an income of $500, I have had all the necessities, and many of the luxuries of life. I have now four healthy, strong and handsome boys, the youngest 2 years old. We have that indispensable comfort of an American household, a cheerful and intelligent cook. One thousand dollars covers all the expenses of our family of seven and the "not infrequent guest." My husband's life is insured in an endowment policy, which is all the provision we have yet made for the traditional "rainy day."

Our bills are all paid, and we can face the future bravely and fearlessly.

I was myself a college bred girl, and our friends all shook their heads nine years ago at our improvident marriage. But it has proved to be the most genuine prosperity that could have overtaken us both.

But I must describe our "modus operandi."

In the first place our home is in one of the beautiful country villages where my husband is employed on a salary of $1,000 a year. Of that we pay $200 per annum for a sunny house of eleven rooms, with garden and stable adjoining; $120 more goes for household help; $20 for literary matter; our coal bill is $50; our kerosene bill with breakage on lamps and chimneys, $15; interest on life assurance, $75; church sittings and benevolences, $50; postage for cow and feed during winter, $25; traveling expenses, $45. Total, $600, leaving $400 for table and clothes.

THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST.

In regard to clothing, we buy only the very best, which we find to be the wisest economy. We buy nothing ready made, I make everything that is worn by myself and the boys. And my husband's suits are custom made. The children are not only healthy, but well dressed. I cut down their father's suits for the older boys, sponging and turning them. When I can no longer remodel my gowns for myself I can always get a kilt or coat out of them for the younger children. A package of dye will readily change the color to any new and desirable shade. One year I buy for myself a black silk, the next a Henrietta cloth of some fashionable shade, and which I can renew at any time by dyeing black. By this means I have always two handsome street costumes.

My husband gets one new suit a year, for which he pays $35. His other wearing apparel brings his clothing bill up to $80, and he always makes a good appearance. I remove my street costume the moment I come into the house. I always wear soft flannels for house dresses—white in summer, dull, warm shades in winter. These are not expensive and make over beautifully for the children.

The shoe, stocking and hat bill for the boys I find the highest of all, but $150 a year covers our clothing expenses. I might remark in passing that I find it very satisfactory to buy the best grade of balbriggan hosiery, white or cream, for my husband and self, and bright colored stockings for the children. These I dye a fast black, and find them stronger and the color more durable than the most expensive grades of black cotton or lisle thread stockings. We have now $250 left for table expenses. "Two hundred and fifty dollars for the table?" I hear you exclaim. "Why, that is but a generous meat allowance!" Yes, we live on $5 a week and live well. I am sure there is not a more appetizing table set anywhere.

PLENTY OF HEALTHFUL FOOD.

My children have never been sick for one day, and their rosy skins and strong white teeth give evidence of nourishing food. We have an unvarying rule of meat only once a day. Our butcher's bill never exceeds $6 per month. We buy the cheaper pieces of meat and cook them in a savory way, excepting our roasts, which are always of the best. A roast of five pounds makes us three dinners. The second day the meat is cut from the bones and made up into meat pie, croquettes, or, if rare, we often slice it thin, fry quickly in butter, spread on neatly trimmed toast and pour over all a rich gravy made of cream, browned flour and seasoning. The third day the bones are cracked, vegetables added and a rich consommé is the result. We use a great many oysters, clams and fish in their season. Our breakfasts are always of fruit, cereals, brown bread or muffins, gems or the like, with honey from our bees, coffee for the adults and plenty of good rich milk for the children.

For ten months during the year we have from our beautiful Alderney, which we have named Butterfly, all the milk we can use. Butterfly gives eighteen quarts of milk daily in the spring, averaging from eight to nine in the winter. We have fresh eggs the whole year through and plenty of spring chickens for table use. Our garden, which my husband spades up in the mornings a little at a time and together we plant and keep weeded, yields an abundance of succulent vegetables, so that during the summer and early autumn we can be really extravagant and have five or six different kinds of vegetables at the noonday dinner.

Our suppers are fit for a king, though suitable to a peasant's purse. A pudding, a salad, berries or other ripe fruit in season, canned fruit during winter, with delicious cream, such as no milkman ever supplies; chocolate, cocoa or tea, and cake; with cream, butter and eggs of our own cake is reduced to a minimum of expense, and in its ever changing forms is always a part of our evening meal.

My letter is long, but I must tell of our summer outing. My husband is the fortunate possessor of a big tent. This we pitch on different parts of the Jersey coast during successive seasons—not with the "madding" but off by ourselves in a quiet nook. There we have an hour's recreation. With gun and rod we find the long days all too short, and come back after two months with a fund of health and happy memories. During these two months "Butterfly" is rented out at $10 per month. Our vegetables are sent down twice a week, and there is no accumulation of big black debts to take from our summer's pleasure.—Cor. New York World.

Didn't Like the Idea.

An Ohio man who was traveling in Spain happened to remark that the United States would probably buy Cuba some day, and he received three challenges from hot headed Spaniards within an hour. He got out of it by saying he meant the Sandwich Islands instead of Cuba.—Detroit Free Press.

When Was Christ Born?

We have no proof that Dec. 25 is the date of the birth of Christ. At one time the beginning of the Christian era was supposed to conform with the date above mentioned, and for that reason was called Christmas by all Christian nations. It is now generally conceded by the best authorities of the world, too, that Christ was not born on Dec. 25 or any other time during the winter. The date now unanimously agreed upon is April 5, not April 5 of the "year of 1," but April 5, B. C. 4. This error in our mode of reckoning time is supposed to have arisen from the fact that the dating of time as "A. D." was not introduced into the church at least, until about the year 527 A. D.—St. Louis Republic.

A Question of Ball.

An English correspondent asks a question which the scientific student of the flight of the baseball ought to be able to answer. He says: "Whilst on the subject of golf I should like to mention that I have noticed a peculiar phenomenon in the flight of a golf ball for which I have been unable to account. The ball on being struck from the tee has taken a very quick and low flight, and when it has traveled fifty or sixty yards has risen in the air, and so left the natural curve of its trajectory. I have been told that a ball has been seen to rise twice in this manner, but I have never seen such a thing myself. Can this be caused by any spin imparted to the ball in the act of striking, or is it the result of its meeting with an opposing current of air?"

Effects of Small Bore Bullets.

A careful investigation into the effects of small bore bullets on the human body has been made by Professor Paul Bruns, of Tubingen. The conclusions arrived at must be considered in all respects satisfactory from a humane point of view. It is found that the hydraulic pressure in the wound is much diminished, partly on account of the smaller diameter of the bullet and partly on account of the spring action of the thin steel coating which surrounds the soft lead core of the new projectile, so that the extensive tearing of the soft tissues of the body, which the old lead bullets used to cause and which often gave rise to the erroneous idea that explosive bullets were employed, will not occur.

The new projectile used with the Belgian Mauser rifle passes at 100 meters through four or five limbs, smashes three thigh bones, placed one behind the other, and makes a small cylindrical opening in the flesh. The entrance of the wound is generally of less diameter than the bullet itself. The exit is a slit or a star shaped opening, with torn edges, about a quarter of an inch wide. At longer ranges—400 to 1,500 yards—the bones are not shattered, but bored through in a clean hole or channel. According to Dr. Bruns, the chances of healing bullet wounds will, notwithstanding the much greater efficiency of the new rifle, be much more favorable than in the case of the larger bores.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

The Lawyers of Congress.

They pepper the house and the senate. You find them on every street corner in Washington, and after they leave public life they settle down here to practice. Of the 412 members of this congress 288 are lawyers. The speaker is a lawyer. All of the leaders of the house are lawyers, and more than three-fourths of the men who hold down those soft $5,000 cushions in the senate are or were lawyers of the law. It has been so since the beginning of the government.

The law is a stepping stone to politics. Clay, Webster and Calhoun were all lawyers. Jefferson was making $5,000 a year at the law when he married. Madison and Monroe had each studied law before they got into politics. Tom Benton practiced in the Tennessee courts before he went to Missouri. Presidents Arthur, Hayes, Johnson and Lincoln practiced law, and so did Pierce, Tyler, Fillmore, Martin Van Buren, Andrew Jackson and James Buchanan. Buchanan made $638 the first year he practiced, and ten years later he had run his fees up to $11,000 a year. He dropped the law when he got into politics, and this is the case with some of the public men of today.—Cor. Philadelphia Press.

The Barber Pole and Basin.

The sign of the striped pole, which can be seen at the door of every barber shop, was adopted as emblematic of the process of blood letting, which practice was a common remedy for nearly all diseases until about fifty years ago. The patient's arm, usually the left, was made bare, he was then given a short, round stick to grasp in his hand, the arm was then tightly wrapped with a narrow bandage or tape to the elbow. This was done in order to get all the blood above the point where the lancet was to be inserted. The red stripe on the pole is symbolical of the arterial blood, the blue stripe of the veins or venous circulation and the white of the arm. The brass basin sometimes suspended from the barber's pole (quite common in Europe, though rarely seen in this country) was anciently one of the utensils of the barber. It resembles a tin pie plate with a semi-circular gap in one side to encompass the throat, and so prevent the lather from soiling the clothes. This was found necessary, as the party being shaved was compelled to sit in an upright position. It will be remembered that Don Quixote assumed a barber's basin as a helmet.—Washington Star.

The School Tax.

Commenting upon the announcement of $2.25 as the school per capita in Kentucky this year, the Winchester Democrat says: "The amount paid by the State of Kentucky, is more than is paid by any other State east of the Mississippi river for this purpose, being nearly one-half of the entire State revenue and this fact alone should silence the cavil of those who are fond of railing at the school system of Kentucky, and asserting that the State has not done her part towards educating her children. The system is all right. The State pays a handsome sum as a basis of support, and the people in each district have it in their power to vote a tax to supplement this sum. If they don't choose to avail themselves of this privilege, they and not the State, are to blame, the chances are that the people of any district who have not sufficient energy and public spirit to raise money enough for a good school, after what the State has done as a basis, would not take sufficient interest to send to a good school if the State paid for the whole."

That's right. The State has done her part, and the counties and districts should now follow suit. The levy of 15 cents on the $100 will be voted on in this county the first Monday in August and every friend of the public schools should rally to its support. Don't defeat the proposition.

Pensioners Must Pay.

The last Legislature passed an act under which it is very likely that pensioners on the United States Government will have to pay the same fees for having papers certified as other common mortals. The act is as follows:

Sec. 1. That Section 5, Article 2, Chapter 16, of the General Statutes, be and the same is hereby amended by striking out in line fourth the words "without any fee or charge therefor," and insert, in lieu thereof, "without charging the State tax for affixing seals."

Sec. 2. This act shall take effect from and after its passage. The act was approved April 4, 1890, by the Governor and certified by G. Mott Adams, Secretary of State.

Under the law all pension papers must be certified by the County Clerk, or if by any other peace officer his authority has to be specially certified to by the County Clerk in each case. For a number of years not a cent could be charged for the work. Now, however, they will, under the new law, be charged the usual fees that anybody else would be charged for the same services.

Mortgages.

Special Census Agent Collins informs the Paris Record that there are 3,000 real estate and nearly double that number of chattel mortgages recorded in the Bourbon County Clerk's office. The real estate mortgages amount to $5,000,000, but he thinks one-third of them have been paid off but no record made of the release. All the loans are held by home capitalists, and the average rate of interest is 7 per cent. There are two $60,000 and several $30,000 mortgages. He says Fayette has 5,221 real estate mortgages amounting to $6,000,000, and that the Seventh Congressional District is considered the most prosperous in the United States. He believes the present census will show an alarming state of affairs. Small farms will decrease 400 per cent. and large farms increase 800 per cent.

A few weeks ago the wires brought the news from Washington City that some Philadelphia parties had presented President Harrison a $50,000 cottage at Cape May. The gift was tendered in such a delicate and courteous way that Mrs. Harrison couldn't refuse it. That's the story as it was sent out from the White House. The press of the land was soon filled with editorials rebuking the President for accepting the gift. The comments, it seems, became too severe for the little man from Indiana, and it is now announced from official circles that the cottage was not a gift at all but that the President actually bought it with his own cash, and has paid $10,000 of the money down. The people of the land will be glad to learn that such is the case. But, why did he wait nearly a month to have the first report corrected and pay that $10,000?

JOHN W. ALEXANDER is one of the best Sheriffs Mason County ever had. He was elected by a phenomenally large majority two years ago, and will be re-elected next Monday. He has no opposition, but wants every one of his friends to turn out and vote for him and for all the rest of the ticket.

Omaha, the first six months of 1890, received 310,000 cattle, 615,000 hogs and 74,000 sheep, being an increase of 87,000 cattle and 40,000 hogs and a decrease of 6,500 sheep, compared with the corresponding period last year.

Mutton can be produced cheaper than either beef or pork. Ten lambs can be grown in six months that will dress as much meat as a steer at two years of age. They will consume no hay or grain, simply pasture, but the steer has to be pastured two seasons, fed hay two winters and grain one. The lambs consume no more grass than the steer does in his second summer, and when sold they bring more money. In case of the lambs the money is returned in six months and the steer in two years. The first cost of the lamb is not so much as that of the steer, for their ewe mothers produce fleeces to pay their way, while the steer's mother has to be raised to at least two years of age without paying anything.

The Fair Privileges.

The fair privileges were sold Saturday afternoon, and they sold well. The successful bidders are, with one exception, home people.

Thomas Guilfoyle secured the beer privilege, paying over $600 for it. The check privilege was knocked off to Robert Pollitt, the hitching privilege to Tolle & Hughes and the dining room to Shafer & Baird.

John Rudy secured booth No. 3, Polk Hicks No. 4, Mrs. Nan Wilson No. 5, Wm. Davis No. 6, Henry Dieterich No. 7, Murphy Bros. of Mt. Oreb, O., No. 8.

The exact amount the privileges brought is not learned, but it was a big figure.

Remember the dates of the fair—Aug. 20th, 21st, 22nd, and 23rd.

Railway News.

The C. & O. is adding 500 feet of side track at Dover.

Mr. M. E. Gilson, formerly of Chicago, has accepted a position with the C. & O.

The Scioto Valley will hereafter be operated as a division of the Norfolk & Western.

Mr. J. B. Harris, formerly with the K. C. at Cincinnati, has accepted the position of Chief Clerk to Mr. F. A. Moliter, Engineer Maintenance of Way of the C. & O.

The strike on the Q. & C. is proving a serious one. Every side track between Somerset and Cincinnati is said to be crowded with loaded freight cars, much of the goods being perishable. But few freight trains are moving on the road, and the K. C. is in bad shape from same cause. Not a freight was sent out from Lexington Thursday night by the latter road.

Large, powerful and fast locomotives are being built for $7,500 to $8,000, and thirty-ton well-built box cars for $500 each or less. In fact, new work is now furnished so cheaply that it hardly pays to rebuild an engine that has run ten or a dozen years, or a car which is much out of shape. The introduction of labor-saving machinery has done much toward decreasing the cost of production of equipment.

The statement of the business of all lines of the Pennsylvania and Erie for June, 1890, as compared with the same month in 1889, shows an increase in gross earnings of $1,240,948; an increase in expenses of $950,778, and an increase in net earnings of $290,206. The six months of 1890 show an increase in gross earnings of $3,395,275; an increase in expenses of $3,388,496; an increase in net earnings of $565,779.

The Ladies Delighted.

The pleasant effect and the perfect safety with which ladies may use the liquid fruit laxative, Syrup of Figs, under all conditions make it their favorite remedy. It is pleasing to the eye and to the taste, gentle, yet effectual in acting on the kidneys, liver and bowels.

"GO"

Is an Americanism that has taken a new meaning, and has been given a force expressive more than any other word, perhaps, of the spirit of the progress of the present day, which, for rapid advancement in all material things, is without parallel in any age of the world.

GO! "A volume in a word." The spirit of GO is in everything American. "Everything goes" from morning until night, and he who is not imbued with the spirit of "GO" must step out of line and have the fatal words "Old Foggy" written on his brow.

GO! So our entire stock of LADIES', CHILDREN'S and MISSES' SLIPPERS and LOW-CUT SHOES must GO at once. Also our entire stock of TAN GOODS must GO. It is not a matter of prices, but one of fact—they must GO.

So come quickly and attend our great Shoe Go. We will not only save you money but give you such styles and values as have no Superior in this or any other market.

A BLACKSMITH SAVES THE LIFE OF A LITTLE GIRL.—Minnie Carney was perhaps as near leaving this world as anyone can be to recover. She was sick with cholera morbus, completely exhausted and unconscious. The physicians in consultation decided the case was hopeless and beyond their control. Chas. J. Newcomb, a blacksmith, walked four miles through the darkness and storm, to get a remedy he had himself used, and which he firmly believed would cure her. That medicine was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhea Remedy. He obtained part of a bottle, with which he hastily returned, and gave the little sufferer a half teaspoonful, which relieved her and consciousness gradually returned. The medicine was given in broken doses, and in a short time she was well. He is positive that it saved her life, and has others in that vicinity. For sale by Power & Reynolds.

The remains will be brought here this evening on the train, and the funeral will take place some time tomorrow from the residence of Mrs. Gray, corner of Front and Sutton streets.

MAYSVILLE'S PROGRESS.

The Bulletin's "Rambler" Notes
Some of the Improvements
West of Market Made in Late Years.

Resuming my correspondence which has been neglected on account of extreme hot weather and a rather lazy disposition, I find in looking over notes taken some time ago that important new improvements were overlooked in previous communications, and as the object of this scribbling is to place before the unthinking a glimpse of what Maysville has done in the last few years without the aid of a boom to inflate prosperity, will still confine myself to matters west of Market street, noticing things overlooked before.

The old shells on Second street formerly belonging to Dr. McGranaghan have been torn away and tasty three-story buildings erected in their place, with solid iron and glass front and back, ornamented in modern style, making an elegant appearance inside and outside, resembling a veritable "crystal palace." One portion of the building is occupied by Mr. Bona, and is a beautifully arranged and improved fruit and confectionery stand and ice cream parlors. The other portion is occupied on the first and third floors by Kackley & McDougle, the second floor by Mr. Kackley, to whom the whole improvement is due, and is used by him as a picture gallery where also you can have your picture taken in any style, to perfection.

There is erected on the north west corner of Second and Sutton streets a three-story brick building in place of the old Gray commission and wholesale grocery house, which was thought at one time in itself a great improvement, but it was torn away to the ground in Maysville's onward progress and the new building is now occupied on the lower floors by the Adams Express Co., Greenwood's paint and oil establishment and Zweigart Bros', meat store. The second floor is used for offices and the whole of the third floor is the steam printing office of T. A. Davis, from which is also issued the sprightly Maysville Republican. This improvement is due to Zweigart Bros.

Along on Third street, near Short, is a new modern dwelling house just finished and will be occupied by the owner Mr. C. D. Outen, United States Revenue Storekeeper at this point. Away down in the extreme West End is a brand new residence on the hill side opposite Holliday's grocery. This improvement is due to Mr. Hunt, a tailor by trade, who has been living in rented property for a long time. The new and imposing residence of Mr. W. C. Shackelford is nearing completion, and is an ornament to the city.

The three-story business houses of E. A. Robinson, proprietor of the famous Limestone Cigar Factory, and of Harry and John Taylor, the stationers and news dealers, opposite Court on Second, are completed. They are now occupied by the owners, and it is a pleasure to gaze on these handsome improvements. Mr. Curley, the plumber, is continuing the good work.

Going up Court street, I note that the venerable court house which has buffeted the winds and rains, hail and snow, and earthquakes and cyclones for nearly a half century, and which a few weeks ago looked as shabby as a sheep's tail, has shed its scales and put on a new garb of glossy red, thanks to the liberal Court of Claims and Jim Hendrixson, who did the work and did it well, too, notwithstanding it was a pecuniary loss to him. I, however, believe in the language of our good Mayor, that "that old thing ought to be torn down and a new court house built that would be an honor to Mason County instead of a disgrace. Paint will do it no good. It will be as shabby as ever in a short six months."

In glancing up and down the street from Robinson's genial resting place, where the "aroma without the acidity" of fine cigars greet the olfactories, it is hard to realize the fact that a few years ago wooden sheds and rusty, dilapidated brick houses stood in place of the present Washington Opera House, January Block, Miner's "Enterprise" corner, Owen's & Barkley's improved stores, the elegant State National Bank, Cox's improved dry goods house, the Bank of Maysville, Oddfellows' Hall, Hechinger's immense clothing house, the European Hotel Building, which has been changed to an attractive dry goods establishment—the "Bee Hive"—all of which improvements have been made so quietly that they creep on us almost unawares; and notwithstanding the mob of croakers that infest the city, improvements are going on, especially east of Market, in rapid and magnificent proportions which will be noticed in future communications.

Dropping down Sutton to the Hill House, I see here evidences of improvement, in the fact that this house which has been partially vacant for years is now full from top to bottom, the rooms being occupied by permanent, first-class guests. Looking out upon the river in front I cannot help exclaim, what a grand and exhilarating view, and casting my eye across Sutton along Front, I observe the beautiful residence and grounds of Mrs. Hamilton Gray, which was but a few years ago a desolate, dilapidated, almost deserted corner. Mrs. Gray has with good judgment selected, improved, rebuilt and modernized this spot to such an extent that with interior and exterior elaborate decorations it now presents the appearance of a lovely, enviable home.

Just below Sutton on Front, but a few steps away, in the place of a recent cholera-breeding miser's den, in which for years the man, his wife and hogs all slept together, there stands the stately residence of Dr. A. H. Wall, a noteworthy addition to Maysville's progress. And right here adjoining my place of rest for the night, is the cozy and elegant brick residence of Mr. G. W. Geisel.

It is now sunset, and for the present I will turn my thoughts from the works of man to the more elevating and never to be improved works of God which are presented to all Maysville in one grand, gorgeous landscape view in front of me and on which I gaze with wonder, delight and reverence, a fit preparation for a night of refreshing sleep and pleasant dreams. RAMBLER.

MINER'S AXIMS

A chain is no stronger than its weakest link.

A shoe is no better than its worst part.

That's worth thinking about.

We'll take the chain first. Suppose a smith forges ninety links of steel. Then, to "skinch," he puts one link of pot metal in the middle. You know where that chain will break, don't you? For practical purposes every link might have been pot metal. But then the "skinning" would be seen at once.

Now for the shoe question.

Suppose, in the making of a shoe, "skinning" is applied to any one feature of it—say, for instance, the thread. It doesn't matter how good every other part of the shoe is, the shoe is no better than its worst thread, no stronger than its weakest part. You know where the shoe will "go" when it starts, don't you? It might as well have been "skinned" in every part. But that would spoil the looks—and looks is everything in a "skinned" shoe. When you come to the conclusion that you don't want a "skinned" shoe, come and buy good ones. We sell them—always sell them. Sell nothing else. We have been

"DICKENS' DUTCHMAN."

Hardly the Abused Creature the Novelist Painted Him.

It is rather a trite subject to refer to the prisoner whom the great novelist made famous by his pity, and who afterward became known as "Dickens' Dutchman," and yet there are features of the marvelous manner in which he gave the lie to the story of "Boz," which Richard Vaux told me, of which he is a part, which may not be generally known. The reminder that this man, Charles Langheimer, was one of the prisoners with whom Dickens conversed, of whose condition he drew such a mournful picture, is scarcely necessary. He compared the little garden leading into the main cell to a grave.

"A more dejected, heart broken, wretched creature it would be difficult to imagine. I never saw such a picture of forlorn affliction and distress of mind," wrote Dickens, and later on he added: "I never saw or heard of any kind of misery that impressed me more than the wretchedness of this man." What a spectacle! This poor creature being driven into his grave by the heartless regulations of the system of solitary confinement! That was in 1841. In 1870 Dickens died. In 1885 Charles Langheimer was still alive. But that is not all the tale. When the novelist saw the German thief he was serving a second term of imprisonment in the penitentiary. After that he served twelve more, or fourteen in all, in the same institution. I once saw him in the quarter sessions after he had been sentenced to a brief imprisonment in the county prison. With tears pouring down his cheeks he begged to be sent back to the penitentiary, even if his time was doubled. His request was granted.

With Langheimer stealing was a disease. Mr. Vaux tells me that at one time he could have trusted him to carry a thousand dollars in gold to bank, but upon his return, if he saw a doorway open he could not resist the temptation to enter it and pick up the first thing he could lay hands on. After his last imprisonment his daughter, who is married to a very respectable man, refused to have anything more to do with him. He was then 80 years of age, and without a penny. He was given an order of entrance to the almshouse. With this in his hand he entered Mr. Vaux's office and said: "See what I have come to. Please don't let me go to the almshouse. Send me out to the prison. It is the only good home I ever had. Please send me back there."

If Dickens could have heard those words I wonder what he would have said.

"Charley," said Mr. Vaux, "I don't know whether or not the warden can take you in, and then, too, you are a dreadful nuisance. But if you will promise to behave yourself you can go out to the prison and ask the warden if he can find room for you."

He presented himself and made his request and pleaded earnestly that it might be granted. Finally the good hearted warden said: "Well, if you behave yourself I guess we can find room for you and enough for you to eat." The old man actually leaped for joy and tore his almshouse pass into bits, which Mr. Cassidy, the warden, afterward collected and pasted together, and the card is now one of the curiosities of the big building. The next time Mr. Vaux visited the prison he met Langheimer, who began one of his customary complaints—similar, probably, to that which deceived Dickens—this time the trouble being of an alleged rheumatic character. Mr. Vaux jocosely seized him by the shoulders and shook him until he screamed. The next time they met, the old man said, laughingly: "Mr. Vaux, shake all the rheumatism out of me!" But in a few days the pains of old age, whose meaning he did not understand, returned with renewed violence, and he sent for the warden. When Mr. Cassidy saw him in his cell he knew that poor Langheimer's time had come, and two hours later he quietly breathed his last in the prison in which he had spent the greater part of a prolonged life. Solitary confinement had permitted him to die of old age.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

White and Deaf.

Mr. Harrison Weir, president of the National Cat club, England, says in his book, "Our Cats," that a white cat of the long or short haired breed is likely to be deaf. Should it have blue eyes, the fancy color, it is almost certain to be deaf.

Mr. Weir, at a cat show, purchased a white cat, a beauty, loving and gentle, for the low price of two guineas. When he got it home, the cat proved to be "stone deaf."

Then the trouble began. If shut out of the dining room, its cry for admission could be heard all over the house, for, being deaf, it did not know the noise it made, though its owner often wished that it could hear its own cry. When it called out as it sat on his lap, it called with ten cut power, and its commanding voice caused it to be named the "Colonel."

One day a friend saw the "beauty," and admired it so much as to accept it as a gift, even after being told that it was "stone deaf." A few days after Mr. Weir received a letter from the friend, offering to return the loud voiced cat.

"Give it to any one you please, but don't return it to us," was the reply.

The "Colonel" was given to a deaf old lady, and both were happy.

One Hundred Yards Dash.

The fastest running thus far done by any amateur for 100 yards from a standstill is ten seconds, and if one may believe the best authorities in the way of sporting journals, amateur runners have been coming up to this limit occasionally ever since 1868, but not one has passed it. In that twenty-odd years some eight American amateurs and an equal number of Englishmen have dashed down the track in the even time of ten seconds, while hundreds have run the course in the next fraction of a second. This record was made first in London in 1868, and last in Detroit in 1889.—Walter Camp, in Century.

A Delicate Repast.

That sprightly Rockland skipper, Capt. Otis Ingraham, of the steamer Penobscot, displays a piece of white cloth about the size of a pocket handkerchief, with curiously frayed edges, which is all that is left of a very elaborate night robe. The garment was a present to the captain, but while hanging on the line at his home in Rockland it was appropriated by a goat belonging to his son. As the goat's regular diet is tomato cans and hoop skirts, he regarded an embroidered night shirt as a real delicacy and of course didn't leave much on the plate.—Lewiston Journal.
